INDEPENDENT FARMER.

Let sailors sing of windy deep,
Let soldiers praise their armor,
But in my heart this toast I'll keep—
The independent farmer.
When first the robe of green

Unfolds its crimson lining; And round his cottage porch is seen
The honeysuckle climbing;
When banks of bloom their sweetness yie

To bees that gather honey, He drives his team across the field, When skies are soft and sunpy.

The black-bird clucks behind the plows. The quail pipes loud and clearly, You orchard hides behind its boughs The home he loves so dearly; The gray and old barn doors unfold His ample store in measure, More rich than stores of hoarded gold,

A blessed, precious treasure; While yonder in the porch there stands His wife, the lovely charmer, The sweetest rose on all his lands-The independent farmer.

To him the spring comes dancingly, To him the summer blushes, The autumn smiles with yellow ray, His sleep old winter hushes. He cares not how the world may move, No doubts or fears confound him, His little flock is linked in love, And household angels round him; He trusts to God and loves his wife, Nor grief or ill may harm her, He's nature's nobleman in life-The independent farmer.

Stock farming pays better than any other kind of farming. In addition, it keeps up the fertility of the soil, while crop raising exhausts the fertility of the soil; and if persisted in long, it will ruin it, unless expensive fertilizers are used. How often do we sigh for opportunities of doing good, whilst we neglect the openings of Providence in little things, which would frequently lead to the accomplishment of most important usefulness. Dr. Johnson used to say, "He who wills to do a great deal of good at once, will never do say," Good is done by degrees. However small in proportion the benefit which follows individual attempts to do good a great deal may thus be accomplished by perspectance, are in the midst of discouragement and limppointment.—Grabbe.

Cultivation of Apples

The following, from an essay by Prof. Beal, of the Michigan Agricultural Colege, are valuable suggestions for applegrowers everywhere:

much as you would treated a hill of corn. Hoed crops will answer in a young or-chard; sowed crops will do much harm to young trees. I think it a good plan to keep young trees mulched, and I am not sure but it is best of all ways to treat large or old trees as long as they live. Mulch prevents the rapid evaporation of moisture from the soil, keeps the surface mellow, prevents the soil from freezing and thawing in winter, and becoming overheated in summer. Whether or not to cultivate trees which have become well established depends upon circumstances. I have never seen an apple orchard which I thought was injured by too frequent shallow culture, but this may be the case in some places, especially in warm climates, or where the soil is deep and very rich. Whether to cultivate or not can be told by the looks of the trees. Now if the color of the leaves is good and the growth all right, and the trees bear well of fine fruit, they are doing well enough even in grass. But if the leaves are pale, the growth of the annual twigs much less than a foot in length on trees set twelve years, and the fruit small and poor, something is the matter, and they are suffering for want of plow, harrow or cultivator, or a heavy mulch or a coat of manure, or two or more of these combined. The upper twigs of twelve years ought to grow six to twelve inches next year. To judge of the condition of an apple-tree is much like judging of the condition of sheep in a pasture. Look at 1. We believe the time has come the sheep and not at the pasture. As long when the farmers of this country ought as the sheep are plump and fat they are

Mr. H. R. Stryges: Dear Sir-We have good reason for regarding your VEGETINE a medicine of the greatest value. We feel savired that it has been the means of saving our son's life. He is now seventien years of age; for the last two years he has suffered from necrosis of his legicanced by scrofulous affection, and was so far reduced that nearly all who saw him thought his recovery impossible. A council of able physicians could give us but the faintest hope of his ever rulying, two of the number declaring that he was beyond the reach of human remedies, that even amputation could not save him, as he had not vigor enough to multiply the proposition of the property of the continuously improving. He has lately resumed his studies, thrown away his crutches and cane, and walks about cheerfully and strong.
